

A wide-angle photograph of a long, straight dirt road stretching into the distance. The road is flanked by dry, yellowish-brown fields and sparse vegetation. In the background, there are rolling hills and mountains, some of which are shrouded in a light mist or haze. The sky is a clear, pale blue. The overall scene conveys a sense of tranquility and vastness in a rural landscape.

Travel around the idyllic Wine Country, discovering sublime landscapes, micro-climates, and a Mediterranean way of life in the heart of California. Thanks to the porous soil and particularly mild climate, Sonoma and Napa Valley produce a multitude of fine wines. Some 340 wineries can be found along the Napa River. A unique oenological journey for lovers of Cabernet Sauvignon, Chardonnay and Pinot Noir...

Saison

Restaurant in town. Joshua Skenes has made fire his signature. He has transposed the campfires of his childhood to Saison, his restaurant in San Francisco, where he refines the art of cooking over hot coals. For him, it's the best way to bring out the flavor of the ingredients. His menus highlight the finest products that exist, even aging them if necessary, as with game and certain vegetables, to concentrate the flavors. His cuisine is the result of know-how, an art that cannot be rushed, and he wants his diners to know that he takes all the time necessary. But the ambience is always relaxed and casual — after the meal, there's nothing like a cup of buckwheat tea amidst the flaming hearth.

Gary Danko

Restaurant in town. The cuisine of Gary Danko, the ambassador of contemporary American fine dining, draws on traditions from around the world. Using seasonings from Asia, he adds a pinch of audacity to his French-style technique, creating dishes like the sublime buckwheat blini with smoked salmon, Kendall Farms crème fraîche and Black Sea Osetra caviar. Danko only uses what's in season. Sea scallops are served with asparagus-pea purée in the spring and paired with butternut squash and caramelized apples in the winter.
